CONCERTED ACTION AGAINST ANARCHY

[By Special Wire to Evening Herald.]
Colorado Springs, Colo., July 10.—A plot for concerted action in putting a stop to the spread of anarchistic teachings in this country was made by President Henry A. Dumbé of Denver this morning in the annual address which opened the seventeenth annual meeting of the Colorado Bar association at the Antlers hotel.

"The Law and the Lawyer" was the subject of the address which members of the bar regard as one of the strongest ever given here.

"There is no constitutional right to preach anarchy," President Dumbé said, "and yet this past ten years have seen an appalling development of the practice. Night after night, the anarchist orator plays upon ignorance and upon discontent and with one purpose—revolution of the existing order of things. Some immediate condition is customarily made the pretext for the anarchy, but the anarchy itself comes in the immediate condition for its basis. It is the old time attack upon all government con-

ORGANIZED ALBUQUERQUE COMES TO FRONT AND SAVES MESA PARK TRACT FOR CITY

As Result of Conference in Commercial Club Yesterday Afternoon Civic and Fraternal Organizations Give Notes for $100 Each to Meet $800. Necessary to Complete Albuquerque's Title to 640 Acres. Notes will be Carried as Moral Obligation Against City Government.

In spite of the indifference of the city council, which permitted to expire without taking any action, the time limit for completing title to the 640 acres of land in the mesa granted to Albuquerque by special act of congress, the valuable property has been saved to the city; the $800 necessary to complete the city's title has been provided and will be forwarded to Santa Fe at once where payment to the land will come to the city of Albuquerque, the land being granted for parks or other public purposes.

Ten days ago the officers of the Commercial club became convinced that the city council had determined to let this land slip out of the city's hands. It had become plain that no action was likely to be taken in the city's interest, and the club addressed letters to the land officials in Santa Fe asking as to the exact status of the land and the date on which last payment might be made.

The sum for making the $800 payment required by the government expired on Monday, July 6. But in response to the club's request an extension of time was given until next Monday, July 12. Another opportunity was given the council to act, but it became plain that no action would be taken. A conference of business men was held yesterday morning at which it was determined to save the land for the city in spite of the indifference of the city government. Belief was expressed at the conference that the vast majority of Albuquerque people were anxious that the land be saved, and acting on this belief a meeting of the board of directors of the Commercial club was held yesterday afternoon to which were invited officers and representatives of all the civic and fraternal organizations in the city. The Shriner, the Elks, the Woman's club, the Knights of Pythias, the Odd Fellows, the Presbyterian sanitarium and other organizations were represented and after brief discussion it was determined to ask eight organizations to give each a note for $100, such notes to be used to pay the $800 required by the government and to be carried by the several organizations as a moral obligation against the city government, whose duty it is to make this payment, until such time as the next city government sees fit to meet the obligation incurred by the notes.

The organizations participating in the action expect the city government to pay this $800 for which they have given their notes. The land was granted to Albuquerque by special act of congress for park or other purposes. The people want the terms of the act of congress complied with and they want the land for the people of Albuquerque, present and future.

The notes, therefore, will be carried as a moral obligation against the city government until such time as a broader view of the city's present and future interests in the city government results in the payment of the notes.

WOMAN'S CLUB HAS SPECIAL MEETING TO APPROVE NOTE

The plan to save the mesa tract for Albuquerque was approved by the Albuquerque Woman's club at a special meeting held this morning at the club building at 10 o'clock, with a considerable attendance of members.

The club women were enthusiastic in their approval of the steps taken yesterday afternoon at the conference in the Commercial club, and upon motion of Mrs. F. H. Kent the officers of the club were authorized to make a note for $100 as the club's share in the $800 necessary to complete title to the land.

NON-INTERVENTION RIGHT POLICY IN MEXICO

So Says Dr. Osuna, Who is Said to Reflect Views of Revolutionary Leaders. Just Back From Torreon.

President Wilson understands the Mexican situation thoroughly, his course has been wisely chosen, the American newspapers and the public should firmly support his policy of non-intervention, says Dr. Elio Osuna, who is close to the leaders of the constitutional movement and is in a position to know what their sentiments are. Dr. Osuna has been in Mexico two months, returning here this week. A Herald reporter talked with him at his office in the Barnett building this morning. Agitation for intervention is being engineered by Carranza with selfish material aims, Dr. Osuna said.

Venustiano Carranza, first chief of the revolution, is a close friend of Dr. Osuna. Villa, too, is a friend of Dr. Osuna. The difference between the two, Dr. Osuna said today, had been much exaggerated. He was convinced it would be settled finally without leaving scars of ill-feeling. He knew the inside of the matter. Dr. Osuna said, but was not at liberty at this time to state it. The truth would come out in a few days in an official report.

But even supposing Villa and Carranza were not entirely harmonized, the doctor said, it would not be a crushing blow to the revolution, as Americans seemed to think. Villa was a great general, Dr. Osuna said, but only one of the leaders in the revolutionary army—not the only one. The revolution would go on without him, if necessary. He was a magnificent general, a brave and patriotic leader, Dr. Osuna said, but there were others in Carranza's armies. There was General Obregon, commander of the division of the northwest, for instance—a splendidly equipped young man. He had control of Sonora, Sinaloa, Tepic and Jalisco, four states, and in none of his campaigns had he received assistance from the armies of the north, the center or the northeast.

Because his operations were closer to the border and had been widely reported in the newspapers, American newspaper readers had been led to believe that Villa was one great general of the constitutional leaders, said Dr. Osuna. It was a mistaken idea, and Villa himself realized exactly what his position was, said Dr. Osuna. Villa had no ambition to be president or dictator. Neither had Carranza. The latter told him, Dr. Osuna said, that he desired merely to see the constitutional program established in his country, and that then he would be ready to retire to his estate and play the part of Cincinnati—live as a plain private citizen, ready to come out only if his country needed him.

General Carranza offered Dr. Osuna the post of chief surgeon of the central division but the doctor declined it. He told the supreme chief that if, at the expected battle of San Luis Potosi, or at any other juncture, his services as a physician should be needed, he would gladly serve in the emergency, but he felt that his practice here required his attention and could not be abandoned for any extended service as an army surgeon. If he went to the front, Dr. Osuna said today, it would be for not more than a few weeks.

Dr. Osuna was at Torreon most of the time he spent in Mexico. He found properties of his there and at Monterrey confiscated by constitutional orders, but they were promptly restored to him when he established his identity before the constitutional land commissioners. The latter are doing excellent work in the northern states, Dr. Osuna said.
